REMINDER DEADLINE FOR CALL FOR SPEAKERS - MONDAY 15th MARCH 2021

"Applying Cognitive Psychology to Forensic Settings"

A joint Queen Margaret University/ SIPR online event
Tuesday 25 May 2021

The SIPR Evidence and Investigation Network is pleased to follow up on the very successful networking event held at Dundee University in 2018. On Tuesday, May 25, 2021, Queen Margaret University will host a virtual networking event, organised by Dr Jamal K. Mansour (QMU) and SIPR Associate Director, Dr Penny Woolnough (Abertay University).

The event will bring together researchers, students, and practitioners actively working on or interested in applying cognitive psychology to forensic settings. Presenters and attendees will discuss current interests and expertise across Scotland, (re)establish key connections, and identify potential new collaborations and avenues for funding.

The final programme, which will be determined following expressions of interest to attend and participate, is likely to comprise a combination of short presentations and facilitated discussion followed by topic-specific break-out networking rooms.

Presentations are invited on a broad range of topics within the theme Applied Cognitive Psychology in Forensic Settings, and might include:

- Eyewitness memory;
- Cognitive Bias in forensic science;
- Jury decision making
- surveillance
- investigative interviewing; and
- police search

We hope you can join us! To register your interest in attending, please contact Dr Jamal Mansour at jmansour@gmu.ac.uk with your name and email address

If you would like to present your research, please additionally provide

*a title for you proposed presentation

*a brief outline of what you would cover (2-3 sentences)
