Teaching Opportunities at the School of Justice, UCLAN (particularly in Criminal Justice, Policing, Law and Sociology)

We are looking to recruit enthusiastic, ambitious and passionate early career academics or postgraduate students to support with the delivery of teaching in the School of Justice at UCLAN.

The roles would particularly involve supporting with the delivery of Criminology, Law, Policing and Sociology modules and the PEQF.

The School of Justice is a growing and thriving working environment, with lots of opportunities for research and teaching-related work experience and a dedicated early career researcher support provision.

This is a brilliant opportunity to develop teaching and research skills in a supportive and collegiate environment.

At least a Masters, or equivalent in a related discipline would be required, with a PhD (including ongoing study) desirable.
