

Socio-legal Survey 2022

Max-Planck-Institut für Rechtsgeschichte und Rechtstheorie

The team of researchers exploring socio-legal trajectories in a two year project (2021-2023) that is housed at the Max-Planck-Institute for Legal History and Legal Theory.

The research project examines the contours and cultures in the field of law and society in Germany and the UK.

It employs comparative and empirical methods alongside self-reflective socio-legal theory to undertake a comprehensive and critical mapping of a disputed and ever-evolving terrain, over the past 60 years.

It will collect comparative data on the institutional landscape and history, academic biographies and identities, and enrich our understanding of key actors and events in the development of non-doctrinal study of law in the last decades.

This survey is part of our data collection, and we would be most grateful if you could spare 15 min to complete it and help us identify the complex stories that make up socio-legal studies.
