

Human Development and Violence
Research Centre

Postdoc opportunity to study violence in large birth cohort studies

Postdoc positions

The Dove Research Center has post-doctoral positions open to study violence in large birth cohort studies in Brazil.

Minimum duration of six months, with the possibility of extended contracts up to 4 years

Prerequisites

Ph.D. in related areas, fluent in English or Portuguese, and the following specific skills

Experience of Research and understanding of theory related to aggression, violence, crime, antisocial behaviour, and child conduct problems

Quantitative research methods

- advanced statistics skills and management of large datasets
- capacity to work independently analysing longitudinal data
- experience working independently with SEM, or multilevel modelling, growth-based or group-based trajectory modelling

Strong writing skills

- outstanding English academic writing skills

For researchers interested in joining DOVE as a postdoc, but without all requisite skills for these posts, please send your details to the contact below, for consideration for future openings.

Submissions deadline: 30 November 2022

Candidates should send to contact@doverresearch.org their CV and a letter of interest (maximum 2 A4 pages), detailing the following:

- evidence of relevant skills
- research interests and career aims
- names and email addresses for two people willing to provide references

Contact
contact@doverresearch.org www.doverresearch.org